

Richard Gascoyne, treasurer at St Mary's Holywell, is involved in looking after the church building and making sure it's fit for use by the local community.

He jokes that when he stands up in church to speak, the congregation drop their heads and say 'it's bound to be about money'. It's an important church for him personally, but also for those who live in the area. He wants to see the church open every day and evening for the needs of the local community.
