The Crown Nominations Commission (CNC) was formed in 1974 (as the Crown Appointments Committee) when the Prime Minister agreed to the creation of the Commission as a means of supplying the Prime Minister with the names of candidates.

The CNC operates within a framework provided by General Synod Standing Orders.

Membership of the Crown Nominations Commission

2017-2022

The current Central Members of the Commission started their service in September 2017. Each CNC consists of the Presidents ex-officio of General Synod; three members elected by and from the House of Clergy of General Synod; three members elected by and from the House of Laity of General Synod; and six members elected by the Vacancy in See Committee of the diocese in which, in addition to these fourteen voting members, there are two non-voting members – the Prime Minister’s Secretary for Appointments ex officio; and the Archbishops’ Secretary for Appointments ex-officio. The full membership of the CNC has a broad reach across the Church.

Presidents ex-officio

Born in London, Justin Welby studied history and law at Trinity College, Cambridge. For 11 years – five in Paris and six in London – he worked in the oil industry, becoming group treasurer of a large British exploration and production company. A major influence both on Justin and his wife Caroline was their experience of personal tragedy. In 1983 their seven-month-old daughter died in a car crash in France. Six years later in 1989, after sensing a call from God, Justin stood down from industry to train for ordination at St John’s College, Durham. After being ordained Deacon in 1992, he spent 15 years serving Coventry Diocese. In 2002 he was made a Canon of Coventry Cathedral, where he ran the reconciliation work based there. During this time he worked extensively in Africa and the Middle East and in 2006 he was appointed Priest-In-Charge of Holy Trinity Coventry. He was appointed Dean of Liverpool in 2007, Bishop of Durham in 2011 and Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate of England and Metropolitan, in 2013. Archbishop Justin maintains a strong interest in finance and ethics joining the Parliamentary Commission on Banking Standards in 2012, and has lectured on reconciliation at the US State Department. His interests include French culture, sailing and politics and is married to Caroline, with whom he has two sons and three daughters.

Replacement Members

2017-2022

Over the lifetime of the Commission, there have been a number of occasions where an Archbishop or Central Member has had a temporary replacement, a deputy, for an appointment process. The process to appoint a deputy for a Central member of the Commission can be found in Standing Order 140 (9) of The General Synod of the Church of England Standing Orders (GS 2010D). A deputy is nominated by either the Chair of the House of Clergy or Laity, depending on which Central member is to be replaced. If an Archbishop is unable to be present at a meeting of the Commission, that Archbishop may nominate a member of the House of Bishops from their Province as a deputy with full voting rights (Standing Order 137 (5)). The Archbishop of Canterbury asked the CNC to support them in their nomination to the See of Dover (2019). This was a full CNC process with the exception that any voting would be advisory, not determinative.

Summary of a Crown Nominations Process
The process for the nomination of a Diocesan Bishop is set within the framework of the Vacancy in See Committees Regulation 1993 as amended and Standing Orders 136–141.

Determining the needs
The CNC draws together the role profile and person specification for the new bishop in the light of a number of documents, including:

- the Diocesan Statement of Needs (prepared by the diocese’s Vacancy in See Committee),
- the Appointments Secretaries’ Memorandum (prepared by the Archbishops’ and Prime Minister’s Appointments Secretaries) following consultations in the diocese and across the wider church
- statistical information about the diocese
- reflections from the Archbishops and information on the wider national and world context.

A draft document is prepared prior to the first meeting of the CNC to enable members to ponder suitable candidates in the light of the requirements identified.

Identifying candidates
Members of the CNC are in effect search agents, using their own knowledge of people and the church. All members of the CNC complete Unconscious Bias training to help them fairly evaluate the information they have on candidates. They use the names that have been submitted by members of the public during consultations, through the public announcement or through their own conversations as a guide as well as the names of those who have been identified as ready to undertake episcopal ministry.

The Archbishop in the chair finalises the list following an iterative discussion amongst the CNC members.

Shortlisting candidates

A typical longlist includes about 8 to 12 names. Candidates provide a Register of Ministers Form (a CV document), a personal statement, and four references. Members use these documents to shortlist candidates against the criteria agreed. The subsequent exploration at the first meeting of the CNC enables members to ponder and discern the candidates they wish to invite to interview.

Interview Process

Typically four candidates are interviewed. Confidential briefing meetings are arranged with a small number of people in the diocese to give candidates the opportunity to find out more about the diocese. These conversations are not part of the decision-making process. Psychometric profiling provides additional information on the candidates, alongside the paperwork mentioned above. All candidates are asked questions on safeguarding and unsatisfactory answers in this area mean that a candidate will not be appointed.

The Discerning in Obedience report reminds us of the importance of picking up clues...into what God might intend to do through this or that person in his or that place. Again, the discussion of each candidate in the light of their interview and the written information enables members to discern who they feel God is calling to be the next bishop of the diocese.

Identifying the candidate

The CNC has to identify one candidate with a two-thirds majority of the CNC’s voting members in a secret ballot to nominate to the Crown via the Prime Minister. The CNC may decide to offer a second name in case the first is unable to take up the role. This second name would also need the support of two-thirds of the voting members.

Following the approval of Her Majesty the Queen on the advice of the Prime Minister, the announcement of the new Bishop is made by No 10 Downing St.

House of Clergy

The House of Clergy is made up of the Lower House of the Convocation of Canterbury and the Lower House of the Convocation of York joined into one House. It consists of clergy (other than bishops) who have been elected, appointed or chosen in accordance with Canon H 2 and the rules made under it (including deans, proctors from the dioceses, forces and university constituencies, and clerical members of religious communities) together with ex officio members and up to five co-opted members.

House of Bishops

A body made up of all Diocesan bishops (as well as The Bishop of Dover who performs many of the Archbishop of Canterbury’s diocesan functions); the Bishop to the Forces; seven suffragan bishops elected from among the total number of suffragan bishops and 8 regional representatives elected by and from senior women clergy.

House of Laity

The House of Laity consists of members from each diocese of the two Provinces elected by lay members of the deanery synods (or annual meetings of the chaplaincies in the case of the Diocese in Europe) or chosen by and from the lay members of religious communities, together with ex officio members.

General Synod

The ‘Parliament’ of the Church of England. The General Synod usually meets twice a year to debate and discuss matters of interest and to consider and approve amendments to Church legislation.

Vacancy in See Committee

A Vacancy in See Committee is required to be in existence at all times in every diocese, but it only meets when there is a vacancy in the See. It has two roles: to prepare a brief description of the diocese and a statement setting out the desired profile of the new Bishop, and to elect the diocesan representatives to the Crown Nominations Commission.
