Mission and Pastoral Measure 2011
on the dispossession of clergy

Appendix E

Dispossession of clergy

- 4.12 The vast majority of dispossessions resulting from pastoral reorganisation schemes will be “technical dispossessions” as it will usually be intended to appoint the person(s) concerned to comparable offices in the new benefices created by the reorganisation as a consequential provision of the scheme and they will therefore not be entitled to compensation. However, amendment of their licenses or statements of particulars to take account of their different responsibilities may be necessary.

Annex F

An extract from the Code of Practice to the Mission and Pastoral Measure 2011
on the Gaulby Judgement
(in relation to a pastoral reorganisation in the Diocese of Leicester)

Appendix F

The Gaulby Judgement

2.13 In 1999 the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council dismissed an appeal from the Reverend A F B Cheesman & others against a decision by the Commissioners to proceed with a pastoral scheme affecting the benefice of Gaulby in the diocese of Leicester. The issue was whether it was right to bring forward proposals to reduce the size of the benefice of Gaulby by pastoral reorganisation when pastoral breakdown procedures under the Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) Measure had been brought against the incumbent then discontinued. The Judicial Committee concluded that use of the then Pastoral Measure was appropriate in this case.

The following points emerge from the judgement:

- The need to have regard to the traditions, needs and characteristics of individual parishes in a proposed pastoral reorganisation can include consideration of 'interpersonal factors';
- Such consideration can include the relationships between parishes, between parishioners, or between clergy as well as the ability of particular incumbents to contribute to the better cure of souls;
- The organisation of the diocese into parishes is for the ease and benefit of the people and not the incumbent;
- The justification for a pastoral scheme must be the better cure of souls (with due regard to the furtherance of the mission of the Church of England); if the sole or dominant purpose of a scheme was to punish an incumbent or deprive him or her of office solely to remedy a breakdown in the relationship with his or her parishioners, it could not be upheld;
- There must be adequate evidence of any factors taken into consideration in a proposed reorganisation; any bad faith would invalidate a proposed scheme.
