Address	Spire Hollin, Glossop, Sk13 7BS
How effective is the school's distinctive Christian vision, established and promoted by leadership at all levels, in enabling pupils and adults to flourish?
Overall grade	Good
The impact of collective worship	Good

School's vision
Opening eyes, hearts and minds. Opening our eyes to possibilities, our hearts to all others and to spirituality and our minds to knowledge. Living the prayer of St Francis with forgiveness for past mistakes, joy in the present and hope for the future.
Key findings
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The Christian vision enables a shared understanding of the school as a highly inclusive family. It is the driving force that enables pupils and adults to flourish in a supportive and loving school community. The vision is less explicit in school documentation, development plans and in the public domain. • Collective worship, RE and how the school's vision is lived daily all make an important contribution to spiritual growth for pupils and adults. • Pupils are loved, nurtured and supported to succeed as individuals. Leaders prioritise wellbeing and this is reflected in the care offered to pupils and adults. • Religious education (RE) enables pupils to develop their understanding of Christianity and other religions studied. However, their knowledge of Christianity is more embedded than that of a range of world religions. • Pupils express ownership of and commitment to the vision and values of the school. This is practically demonstrated in the way they show respect to all and live well together. However, pupils' experience of world cultures is not as developed.
Areas for development
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Extend the monitoring and evaluation of the impact of the Christian vision. This is to enable an ongoing process to inform future school development. • Ensure that the content and delivery of RE enable pupils to build upon their prior knowledge in the range of religions and worldviews studied. • Expand and widely promote pupils' experiences of a multicultural world. This is so that pupils understand their place within a diverse and interconnected world.

Inspection findings

The prayer of St Francis is the foundation for the spiritual, social and academic direction of the school. Consequently, the vision underpins the school's inclusive practice where everyone is respected and celebrated. Through the vision, forgiveness is central to how the school achieves a deep sense of belonging. Each new day is a fresh start. Pupils are reassured that errors are a natural step in their learning. Staff ask them if they are ready to learn from mistakes and adults are tenacious in supporting the more vulnerable. This enables pupils to learn with confidence, free from the fear of failure. The vision promotes an awareness that everybody matters and that all are respected. Each person is cherished in this community, individually valued and loved as one of God's children.

The skilled governing body are diligent in maintaining the distinctive Christian ethos of the school. They ensure that the process of their leadership discussions, and subsequent decisions, are founded upon the school's vision. However, the vision is less explicit in school documentation. Consequently, ensuring that the vision remains a consistent driving force for monitoring and evaluation is not meticulously achieved. Governors make good use of the support and training offered by the diocese, opening their eyes to sustained good leadership. This enables foundation governors to successfully achieve church school oversight. Governors are hence more able to hold the school leadership to account. Strong links exist between the school and the local church. Clergy regularly attend and lead worship. This creates a sense of familiarity for ongoing pastoral support for pupils and adults.

Pupils flourish through the arts. They have boldly and successfully pursued and achieved the Artsmark award. This enables a springboard for life to be lived in all its fullness. Leaders recognise how this enables spirituality to thrive. There is a deep sense of developing the whole child, celebrating how talent and aspiration opens the eyes to possibilities. This enables pupils to be confident and articulate learners. The school shares a deep awareness of spirituality. Staff discuss how planned and spontaneous spiritual opportunities have enhanced personal growth for pupils and adults.

Staff model how to open hearts to all others, embracing loving and compassionate relationships, enabling all to flourish. Consequently, behaviour is very good throughout the school. Pupils enjoy their learning, characterised by their high level of engagement in lessons and their respect and care for others. Staff create a happy and supportive learning environment. In collective worship, RE and their daily school experience, pupils reflect upon Christian character virtues. Pupils spontaneously notice the needs of others and respond thoughtfully, with kindness. For example, at a recent sports tournament pupils offered to join another school team when their opponents were short of players.

Opportunities to respond to social need and environmental matters are identified and acted upon. For example, seeing homeless people on a visit to a nearby city moved the pupils into action. Through such awareness pupils know that they can approach those they consider well placed to make a difference. Pupils have a voice in choosing which local charities to support. They consider the challenges and become increasingly aware of the social needs within their community. Through a concern for the environment pupils challenge the overuse of plastics and raise awareness of the volume of material that is in use, but then wasted.

Leadership instil confidence and trust and, as a result, encourage open dialogue with adults. Staff are confident to express opinions and can always seek clarification and assurance. They reflect that honest self-appraisal is respected by leaders which becomes the basis from which they develop professionally. Undertaking nationally accredited leadership qualifications provides them with new insights that nurture their professional development.

Leadership is attentive to parental views. Parents remark that children feel safe and they learn to make allowances for each other, responding to how the school promotes forgiveness.

The school attends the local church for major Christian festivals. Pupils arrange and plan services there, demonstrating their knowledge and understanding of the church's calendar. Clergy remark that they do not need to add more to the pupils' leadership of collective worship because 'they say it all'. In school, the pupil chaplains begin school collective worship, welcoming each class. The themes of whole school collective worship are taken back to the classrooms. Dedicated reflection spaces successfully remind pupils of the virtues that have been discussed through worship, enabling them to reflect further. As a result, pupils talk knowledgeably about how these make a difference to their choices and actions. One pupil remarked that his superpower was kindness. In making good use of this special space pupils write deeply personal prayers. Pupils also know how to use this space to take the time to be quiet in spiritual reflection. Another pupil said that prayer helps them to reflect upon how God knows them. Pupils affirm that collective worship positively impacts upon their mood, enabling joy in the present moment. They find it to be a time for peaceful reflection, where happiness is shared. Local Christians come into school to lead collective worship. This enables the pupils to experience the wider community in worship, meeting Christians in the expression of their faith.

Pupil chaplains regularly met to discuss collective worship. In discussion with clergy and leaders, pupils evaluate its impact. They discuss and direct the choice of songs. They ensure collective worship includes opportunities to sit quietly and think. They also value the time to talk and share insights. Chaplains take pride in preparing for collective worship, ensuring that everything is in its place, ready for each occasion.

Using the locally agreed syllabus and the 'Understanding Christianity' programme, the RE curriculum is planned with sound resources. Pupils are able to discuss significant Christian festivals and are able to compare and contrast key elements of world faiths and worldviews. RE weeks provide the opportunity to explore these further. However, the way that pupils record their learning does not enable them to successfully sequence knowledge. Consequently, their ability to recall their learning is limited. Pupils' experience of a multicultural world is currently under-developed. Leaders recognise that exploring cultural diversity further will enhance the pupils' understanding of an interconnected world.

St Luke's lives its vision. Pupils and adults successfully work together ensuring that the prayer of St Francis provides the foundation for each day. Consequently, this bond unites the community, applying forgiveness, joy and hope in equal measure.
